

Rules of Engagement for the Illustrious Crew of The Scallywag

---

By Command of Captain Bartholomew "Black" Hook

Hear ye, hear ye! Let it be known throughout the decks and depths of this mighty vessel, The Scallywag, that these are the standing orders, the immutable laws, and the very bedrock upon which our shared fortune and survival shall rest. Read them. Memorize them. Live by them. Failure to adhere shall invite the Captain's personal attention, and few men live to tell that tale twice.

Article I: Loyalty to the Flag and Captain

Your first and foremost allegiance is to The Scallywag and to your Captain, Bartholomew "Black" Hook. Any whispers of mutiny, dissent, or insubordination shall be met with the swiftest and gravest of judgments. Loyalty is not merely expected, it is demanded.

Article II: Duty and Diligence

Every man and woman aboard holds a station and a duty. From the highest officer to the lowest powder monkey, your work is vital to the ship's success. Shirking duties, laziness, or dereliction of responsibility will not be tolerated. The ship sails on effort, not on wishes.

Article III: Conduct in Battle

When the cannons roar, and the cutlasses clash, every hand is expected to fight with the ferocity of a kraken. Cowardice in the face of the enemy, retreat without order, or failing to lend aid to a shipmate under assault shall be punishable by the plank. We fight as one. We win as one.

Article IV: Sharing of Plunder

All spoils acquired through our collective daring and skill shall be brought before the Quartermaster for proper accounting and distribution as per the Captain's decree. Any attempt to hide, hoard, or pilfer from the common stock will result in forfeiture of all shares and severe punishment. What's caught together, is shared fairly, or not at all.

Article V: Respect for Shipmates

While banter and brawls are the lifeblood of a pirate crew, outright treachery, murder, or wanton cruelty towards a shipmate without cause shall be dealt with by the Captain himself. We may be rogues, but we are a crew.

Article VI: Provisions and Grog

The Quartermaster shall oversee the distribution of all provisions and grog. Complaints are to be addressed through proper channels. Any unauthorized access to stores, theft of rations, or tampering with the grog barrels will be met with immediate and dire consequences.

Article VII: Secrets of the Sea

Loose lips sink ships. Matters of strategy, destination, and the nature of our prey are for the Captain and his trusted officers alone. Gossip, idle speculation, or the divulging of vital information will be considered an act of sabotage.

Article VIII: Consequences

Infraction of these rules, depending on severity, may lead to flogging, loss of shares, keelhauling, marooning, or a swift walk off the plank into the welcoming embrace of Davy Jones. The Captain's word is law, and his judgment is final.

Let these rules be a lantern in the darkness and a whetstone for your resolve. We sail for glory, and we sail under these unbreakable tenets.

Issued by the Hand of Captain Bartholomew "Black" Hook. May the winds be ever at our backs, and the rum ever in our cups!
